What if major property developments had to be approved by those who lived within its watershed?

How can we use maps to expose the infrastructure of our politics?